General Guidelines for Authors and Editors

HOW TO USE THIS DOCUMENT

The guidelines outlined in this document apply to all Bloomsbury Academic and Professional imprints, including the Arden Shakespeare, Backbeat, Bloomsbury Libraries Unlimited, Bloomsbury Professional, Bloomsbury Visual Arts, Fairchild Books, Hart Publishing, Methuen Drama, T&T Clark and all associated imprints.

This document is written in UK English; if you are submitting your manuscript in US English, please adapt the quote marks, punctuation etc. accordingly – full details on our house style requirements for US English can be found in the guidelines.

Authors should follow these guidelines as closely as possible, as well as adhering to any additional style points provided by their editor. This document also includes Appendices which will provide important guidance on abbreviations and formatting for certain imprints, as follows:

- Authors submitting manuscripts for T&T Clark titles should follow the general guidelines, and consult Appendix A for guidelines regarding biblical abbreviations.
- Authors submitting manuscripts for Arden Shakespeare titles should follow the general guidelines, and consult Appendix B for guidelines regarding abbreviations for Shakespeare's works and formatting of extracts.
- Authors submitting manuscripts for Methuen Drama titles should follow the general guidelines, and consult Appendices C and D for guidelines regarding the formatting of play texts.

MANUSCRIPT PREPARATION

Cross References

As a rule, authors should avoid cross-referencing in text; where they are necessary, authors should cross-refer by chapter and subheading (Example: 'See Chapter 6, "Challenges and Limitations"') rather than a particular page to avoid issues with ebooks and/or where pagination changes.

Headings

Headings must be differentiated to indicate their order of importance. Make sure the various categories of heading (chapter headings, subheadings and sub-subheadings) are clearly indicated and consistent. It is advisable to demarcate headings with the appropriate heading level (Example: <A>, , <C>) to avoid confusion.

Images

Do not embed images within your manuscript, as it means they cannot be checked for resolution and quality benchmarks. Submit images as .tif or high-resolution .jpg files, ensuring they meet the following minimum resolution guidelines at a size appropriate for the dimensions of your book (aim for a minimum of half-page). If you are unsure of your book's dimensions, check with your editor.

- Halftone/colour images (where applicable): 300 dpi at print size
- Line diagrams/maps: 600 dpi at print size

Images should be cropped to remove any extraneous detail and should be free of watermarks, colour bars etc. Any required changes to images (e.g. cropping) should be communicated to your editor when handing over, so they can brief the production team accordingly.

Language

Bloomsbury titles use either UK English or US English (following -ize spellings for both); variant forms (Australian, Canadian etc.) are not acceptable, and the copy editor will amend the manuscript to suit the language requirements of the title. It is essential that you submit your manuscript according to the guidelines set out for the language chosen. If you have any queries regarding the language chosen for your title, please consult your editor.

Manuscript Structure

A set of preliminary pages should be included at the beginning of your manuscript upon delivery of the work to your editor. The pages should be ordered using Roman numerals. If you have no content for the page (for instance, the imprint/copyright page), insert a correctly numbered page with the corresponding heading (one would title the page 'Imprint page').

The order of the Prelims should be as follows:

- Half-title
- Series page (where applicable)
- Frontispiece (where applicable)
- Title page
- Imprint/copyright page
- Dedication (where applicable)
- Epigraph (where applicable) – see note below
- (Table of) Contents
- (Lists of) Plates, Figures, Maps and Tables (in that order) – fresh page for each (where applicable)
- (List of) Contributors (except for US English titles, where this appears in the endmatter) (where applicable)
- Foreword (written by someone other than the author) (where applicable)
- Preface (written by author) (where applicable)
- Acknowledgements (where applicable)
- Note on Text/Translation etc. (where applicable)

- Conversion Tables for imperial measures, currency etc. (where applicable)
- (List of) Abbreviations (where applicable)
- Chronology (where applicable)
- General Map(s) relevant to the whole book (where applicable)

Note: Material used in epigraphs (either in the frontmatter or individual chapters) is not covered by fair-use guidelines, and so permission must be obtained for its use.

The table of contents should not contain any elements appearing before it. Lists are referred to on the contents page as List of Illustrations, List of Abbreviations etc. However, their own headings should be simply Illustrations, Abbreviations etc.

Special Characters

Please talk to your editor about special characters, such as mathematical symbols, musical notation or foreign language characters (including diacritics), in advance of submitting the manuscript. To ensure accurate reproduction across print and electronic deliverables, a Unicode font must be used for any special characters; where such characters are used extensively, PDFs of each chapter should be supplied to ensure that the character is reproduced faithfully at proofs.

VOLUME EDITORS' GUIDELINES

Editors of multi-contributor collections must check that all contributors use the same system of references throughout as well as ensure consistent style (consistency on a chapter-by-chapter basis is not acceptable). Volume editors must also make sure headings in the table of contents conform exactly to those used by the individual contributions. Finally, they must provide contributors with guidelines to ensure standardized artwork or arrange for all artwork to be produced together.

When the manuscript of an edited collection is submitted we request that you include a 'Notes on Contributors' section with a few lines of information on each contributor involved – that is, current position, main field of research and major publications to date. (See Author Biographies.)

Style Guidelines for Authors and Editors

The following document outlines the general style guidelines for our titles; where our UK English and US English styles differ, clarification is given. For spelling queries and any areas not covered here, please consult the following publications:

As a Bloomsbury author, we are delighted to offer you free access to our highly regarded online referencing resource – Cite Them Right (<https://www.citethemrightonline.com/home>).

Cite Them Right is designed to advise users how to reference correctly across eight referencing styles. Based on the best-selling book in its 12th edition, by Richard Pears and Graham Shields, it is trusted by academic institutions globally, and accessed by thousands of users daily.

What makes Cite Them Right unique is the range of referencing styles that can be accessed – including Chicago, Harvard, APA, IEEE and MLA – as well as teaching the user how to reference just about any source. It also contains useful articles and videos, which help guide users through common queries related to referencing.

If you would like access to Cite Them Right while you are preparing your manuscript for publication, please contact your editor and they will provide you with access details.

STYLE FOR COPY

Belonging and Inclusion

Bloomsbury is committed to belonging and inclusion, and promotes ethically responsible research. We therefore encourage authors and editors to:

- Consider diversity in their selection of contributors, texts, references, images, and case study examples
- Use bias-free language in their work

Many referencing and style guides include advice for using bias-free language; in particular, we ask that authors and editors consult the following resources when preparing their manuscript:

- APA Inclusive Language Guide: <https://www.apa.org/about/apa/equity-diversity-inclusion/language-guidelines>;
- C4DISC Guidelines on Inclusive Language and Images in Scholarly Communication: <https://c4disc.pubpub.org/guidelines-on-inclusive-language-and-images-in-scholarly-communication>
- Be aware of any material that may be sensitive or offensive (e.g., sexually explicit or violent, racist, ableist, ageist, colonialist, genderist) or that discusses legally protected characteristics

We acknowledge that work may engage with or quote such material for the purposes of critical study and analysis; if you anticipate using such material, please inform your editor in advance of submission, so it can be appraised ahead of acceptance. Any content which could be considered bigoted or prejudiced, or triggering for readers or staff, may be challenged by your editor and, if necessary, recommended for removal.

Formatting

Figures

Images that are to be integrated with the text should be supplied as individual image files and should have their position indicated in the text on a new line following the paragraph in which it's discussed or between paragraphs closest to where you want the image to appear.

Example: [Figure 2.3 here]

It will not always be possible for the typesetter to place images exactly as indicated, so they should be referred to by number and not as 'the image above', 'the following image' etc.

For authored titles, figures are usually numbered sequentially throughout the book (1, 2, 3 etc.) but can be double-numbered by chapter (1.1, 1.2, 2.1 etc., where the first number is the chapter number and the second number is the consecutive figure number) if preferred; please consult with your editor and number them accordingly. For multi-contributor works, double number the figures by chapter.

Captions and Credits

Image captions in the text will usually include the full source information for the image, including title, year of production/publication etc. Credit information for images, video and sound will normally appear after the caption, preceded by a full point/period. Use the wording agreed with the original permission holder where applicable.

Example: Figure 1.1. Winston Churchill in his study at Chartwell, c. 1934. Courtesy Hulton Getty Images.

In some cases, the List of Illustrations or Acknowledgements can be used to include credit lines (thus removing the need for them in the in-text captions); however, this should only be done if the permissions agreement with the copyright holder allows it, so consult with your editor as to the correct approach.

Lists

Lists of points should be numbered or bulleted, indented and with a space above and below.

Example:

There are several factors at work here:

1. A steady growth in the population. In part this may be traced to improvements in the food supply as a result of agricultural innovations. This is, however, open to dispute.
2. The growth of credit facilities. Banks had mushroomed in the early decades of the century, as had insurance houses etc.
3. Increased government involvement in housing. There were several statutory measures passed in the period. Von Brandt's influence was notable here as was that of Schmidt.

Paragraphs

Indent the first line of a new paragraph consistently (except immediately after a heading, or after an extract if the sense of the paragraph continues from the extract, when the paragraph should start flush with the left-hand margin). Do not add extra space between paragraphs, as this can be confusing for the copy editor. Avoid too many short paragraphs, as these break up the flow of the text.

Tables

Use Word's Table tool to create rows and columns. Tables that are to be integrated with the text should be typed with the text. If typed on separate sheets, they should have their position indicated in the text immediately following the paragraph in which it's discussed.

Example: [Table 2.3 here]

It will not always be possible for the typesetter to place tables exactly as indicated, so they should be referred to by number and not as ‘the table above’, ‘the following table’ etc. For the same reason, any explanatory notes should appear beneath the table (denoted as a, b, c etc.) rather than being styled as footnotes or endnotes.

For authored titles, tables can be numbered either sequentially throughout the book (1, 2, 3 etc.) or be double-numbered by chapter (1.1, 1.2, 2.1 etc., where the first number is the chapter number and the second number is the consecutive table number). For multi-contributor works, double number the tables by chapter.

Table captions should use title case with no full point/period at the end. The source of the table should go beneath the notes, with the word ‘Source’ followed by a colon.

Example:

Table 1. Table of Job Divisions and Staffing

Administration	Professionals	Technicians	Craftspeople
Board Members	Curators	Photographer	Preparators
Director	Conservators	Lighting Engineer	Electricians
Project Manager	Designers	Sound Engineer	Marketing Team

Source: F. Sayer, Public History (Bloomsbury, 2015).

Source lines should be formatted to match your book’s citation style; adjust for author–date citation style if used in the text (Example: Source: Sayer (2015)).

Style Sheet

The copy editor will compile a style sheet specific to the title; however, the following preferred spellings for commonly used terms will be followed unless specified otherwise:

analyse (UK) / analyze (US)	Global South	prêt-à-porter
antisemitism	i.e. (UK) / i.e., (US)	qua
a priori	ibid.
Art Deco	Impressionist (art)	role-play
Art Nouveau	internet

email
		Western Europe
focused, focusing	per cent (UK) / percent (US)	white
fin de siècle	per se	(ethnic/cultural/social)
First World War
global majority

STYLE FOR PRELIMS AND ENDMATTER

The half-title page should include only the main title of the book; the main title page should include the full title, subtitle, edition number (where relevant) and author/editor names. These should follow house style ('and' used instead of ampersands; use of serial comma to reflect the style of the book).

Author Biographies

The first lines of author biographies in the List of Contributors or About the Author section (where included) should adhere to the template below, with the author's name in bold and giving their current position(s) in the first sentence. Job titles should be upper-cased except when referring to a non-specific role.

Example: Charlie Whitham is Senior Lecturer in American History at Edge Hill University, UK.
Kristina Milnor is a professor in the Department of Classics and Ancient Studies at Barnard College, USA.
Andrew D. Buck teaches in the History department at Queen Mary, University of London, UK.

For deceased authors, write in the past tense and include their last professional position.

Example: David Hey was Emeritus Professor of Local and Family History at the University of Sheffield, UK.

Subsequent text should include recent or notable publications; biographies in the List of Contributors section can also include current research interests. Biographies should not exceed 100 words, and lists of publications should only include the year of publication (not the place or publisher).

Example:

Kristina Milnor is a professor at Barnard College in the Department of Classics and Ancient Studies. Her research interests focus on Latin literature, feminist theory and Roman social history in the late republic and early Roman Empire. She has published on gender studies and law in the age of Augustus. Her most recent book is Graffiti and the Literary Landscape in Roman Pompeii (2013).

Lists of Abbreviations and Glossaries

Generally, abbreviations should be given parenthetically in text after the first use of the full term. However, where many abbreviations are used, or a few given frequently, it can be useful to provide a List of Abbreviations in the prelims. These should be formatted in two columns, with the abbreviation in the left-hand column and the full term in the right; entries should be alphabetized by the abbreviation, not the full term.

Example:

DC	Daily Courier
LA	Liverpool Archdiocesan Archive
MEN	Manchester Evening News
NYT	New York Times

RN Royal Navy
TNA The National Archives (Kew, UK)

Glossaries may be used where a book features a number of important or unfamiliar terms which require defining; however, terms should generally be explained at their first appearance in the text (and can be boldfaced if desired), and definitions in both the body text and the Glossary should conform.

Glossaries should be formatted in two columns, with headwords given in bold in the left-hand column and definitions in the right, sorted alphabetically by headword. Headwords should not be capitalized unless the term is a proper noun or usually capitalized.

Example:

ayan	Muslim notables who played critically important roles in local society as landowners and government officials during the period of Ottoman rule.
Byzantine Empire	The Eastern Roman Empire after the sixth century CE with its capital being Constantinople.
Demotic Greek	The vernacular version of Greek spoken by the common people (see Katharevousa).
dowry	The property that a woman brings into a marriage and that is provided to her by her family in lieu of an inheritance.

Spelling and Punctuation

Be aware that for consistency, and following our preferred dictionaries, both UK and US house styles follow -ize spellings (Example: organize, organization). However, alternative spellings in quoted material, book and article titles should not be changed.

Always follow either the Oxford English Dictionary (UK English) or Merriam-Webster's Dictionary (US English). Note that spelling in the manuscript should be consistent with the relevant dictionary; guidelines given below, unless otherwise indicated, are in UK English, but should be adapted where necessary. Preferences regarding the spelling of many common terms can be found in the Style Sheet on p. 7 of this document.

Abbreviations and Contractions

Familiar abbreviations can be used throughout. Less familiar ones (those specific to the subject area of the book) should be written out in full in parentheses after their first mention only. Authors can provide a List of Abbreviations in the prelims if appropriate. (See also: Lists of Abbreviations and Glossaries.)

UK English	US English
Omit the full point after contractions (abbreviations including the first and last letter of the word). Some other abbreviations drop the full point, including most units of measurement. Example: Mr; Mrs; Dr; St; Ltd; PhD; mm; edn; eds; but: ed. ('editor', 'edited by'); vols However, lowercase initials forming abbreviations should always be followed by full points. Example: n. (note); p. (page); in. (inch); vol. (volume); e.g.; i.e.; etc.; et al.	Per Chicago Manual of Style , retain the period after contractions where the last letter is lowercase. Example: Mr., Mrs., Dr., St., Ltd., ed. (editor, edited by, edition), eds. (editors), vol., vols. Some other abbreviations retain the period, including empirical measurements. Example: mi. (mile), in., lb., ft.

Do not include full points in sets of upper-case initials (Example: UN; USA; NATO; UK; EEC; NY [state]). The plural form does not take an apostrophe (Example: NCOs). Acronyms should always be upper-case.

See also: Measurements.

Capitalization

As a general rule, use a minimum of capital letters throughout, including in chapter headings, subheadings, figure captions and labels, although proper nouns should always be capitalized.

When capitalizing proper nouns, 'the' should only be capitalized when it forms part of the noun (Example: the Netherlands; the Guardian; but The Spirit of St Louis).

Brand Names

Capitalize as per proper nouns (Example: Thermos, Vaseline, Spitfire etc.). Check for accuracy where capitalization is unconventional (Example: InDesign).

Geographical

Use North, South, East, West if part of a political division (Example: Southwest Africa, Western Europe, the West, Global South). Other instances should remain lowercase (Example: south of Scotland, southern Scotland, western winds); sun, moon and earth also remain lowercase.

Institutions

Use an upper-case initial when the name is being used specifically or is a proper noun, but not when used generically.

Example:

The state (i.e. the body politic), the church (institution); the Roman Catholic Church, the Church of England; Parliament, the Houses of Parliament but parliamentary behaviour, parliamentarians

Political

Political parties take capitals but concepts (Example: communism, fascism, capitalism, social democracy, socialism) do not. Ensure a distinction is made when using terms such as 'Radical/radical' and 'Liberal/liberal'; capitalize when referring to a political party, but use lowercase when the term is used in a general political sense.

Example:

The Conservative Party, but the party; the Labour government, the government, government policy; the Left of the party, left-wing politics; the Ministry of Defence, the Ministries of Defence and Agriculture; a member of the Liberal Party, liberal views

Titles

Use an upper-case initial when referring to the title as, or part of, a proper noun; otherwise, use a lowercase initial.

Example:

President Obama; Barack Obama, the president; King Abdullah II; the king of Jordan; Member of Parliament (UK); the foreign secretary; Pope Benedict XVI; the pope

Italics

Italics must be used for the following:

1. Titles of published books, though not the Koran, the Bible or the books of the Bible; titles of periodicals; long poems; plays; films; operas and oratorios; video games; paintings, drawings, photographs, statues and other works of art (whether original or translated); short-term exhibitions and titles of exhibition catalogues; album titles; television and radio programmes (but not individual episodes, which should be

- roman and within quotes).
- 2. Names of ships, but not the prefix (Example: HMS Valiant; SS Oriana).
- 3. Non-English words or phrases in an English sentence (but roman and quotes for foreign quotations; see below).
- 4. To identify letters (Example: ‘the letter t’).
- 5. For passim, c. (circa) and sic.

Use italics for emphasis sparingly. It is usually possible to make your point without special emphasis.

The following do not use italics: titles of articles, chapters, short stories and poems, and song titles (use roman and quotes for these); software packages; artworks from antiquity; titles of world’s fairs and other large-scale exhibitions and fairs (which should be capitalized but not in italics or within quotes); apostrophes; possessive ‘s’ following an italicized word (Example: ‘the Discovery’s home port’); e.g.; i.e.; cf.; ibid.; viz.

In italic headings it is not necessary to distinguish foreign words or phrases by the use of quotes; instead, the word or phrase should be romanized.

Numbers

In general, use words for numbers one to one hundred; from 101 upwards use figures. Large round numbers may be spelled out when not part of a series.

When denoting a sum of currency, ‘2 million’ etc. is acceptable (Example: ‘The lottery jackpot had grown to £13 million’).

If two series of quantities are being dealt with it may be clearer to use words for one and figures for the other.

Example: Ten wards held 16 beds each, but nine others contained as many as 40.

Use figures for exact measurements and series of numbers.

Example: Tom has a stick measuring 2.3 metres.
He had three children, aged 4, 9 and 20, respectively.

Hyphenate spelt-out numbers (Example: twenty-one, two-thirds). However, use figures to avoid too many hyphens; ‘62-year-old man’ is preferable to ‘sixty-two-year-old man’.

Use a comma in thousands and larger numbers, following the UK and US convention (Example: 6,580; 12,000; 100,000). However, do not include commas or spaces in dates, page numbers, or reference numbers.

Figures are always used in percentages except when starting a sentence. Always spell out per cent (UK) / percent (US) in the text; ‘%’ should be used only in tables.

Elide numbers as far as possible except in measurements and when using Roman numerals: 21–4, 130–3, 115–19. Note that numbers from 11 to 19 retain the first ‘1’, i.e. 11–18, rather than 11–8. Do not say 2–3,000 if you mean 2,000–3,000.

When referring to a billion, note that for both UK and US English this is now taken to be a thousand million (10⁹) and a trillion is a million million (10¹²); however, other countries (such as France and Germany) use different values, so make this clear if necessary.

Do not start a sentence with a numeral. Spell the number out or turn the sentence round.

Dates and Time

UK English	US English
Generally, use the following format for dates: 1 May 1975; ‘from 4 August to 10 September 1975’ not ‘4 August–10 September 1975’.	Generally, use the following format for dates: May 1, 1975; “from August 4 to September 10, 1975” not “August 4–September 10, 1975.”

Use ‘from 1924 to 1928’ not ‘from 1924–8’; ‘between 1924 and 1928’ not ‘between 1924–8’. However, elision (removing repeated numbers) of dates is allowed for periods (Example: ‘Here are the figures for 2001–10’).

In most cases, ‘CE’ (Common Era) and ‘BCE’ (Before Common Era) should be used in place of ‘BC’ and ‘AD’. ‘CE’ and ‘BCE’ follow the year (Example: ‘30 BCE–25 CE’). Where it is more appropriate to use ‘BC’ and ‘AD’, note that ‘BC’ follows the year, but ‘AD’ precedes it (Example: ‘AD 47’).

Century names should be spelled out in all cases.

Example: in the fifth century

When used as an adjective, the term should be hyphenated.

Example: the fourteenth-century prelate

If using a century name to start a sentence, always spell it out.

Example: Twentieth-century philosophical thought posits

N.B. Use ‘the mid-fourteenth century’ (noun) but ‘an early-fourteenth-century prelate’ (adjective).

Pairs of dates can be elided using an en dash (not a hyphen), as follows: 1970–1, 1972–3, 1915–18. However, date ranges spanning over two centuries cannot be elided (Example: 1809–1903). Date ranges which begin with the first year of a century should be treated similarly (Example: 2000–2012). BCE date ranges should not be elided.

Use a solidus (forward slash) for a year, such as a financial or academic year, covering more than one calendar year: 1898/9; the years 1895/6 to 1897/8.

Decades should follow the form ‘1930s’, not ‘1930’s’ or ‘thirties’. In more colloquial contexts, use the capitalized term (Example: ‘Thirties’).

Months can be abbreviated in tables and notes, but always use the name of the month and not the number (as UK and US dates are styled differently, and thus it can create confusion).

Express measurements of time as follows: six months; 8.00 am (UK) / 8:00 a.m. (US), 10.00–11.15 pm (UK) / 10:00–11:15 p.m. (US); eight o'clock, half past eight; a five-minute break, but five minutes' start.

Measurements

Use the metric system, except in cases where the official system of measurement is imperial (some institutional regulations are still in imperial, for example) – in which case, use imperial first followed by a metric equivalent in parentheses. This last rule extends to the captions and labels for artwork.

When expressing a decimal fraction less than one whole of a unit of measurement, always use the singular form of the unit.

Example: 0.1 centimetre (UK) / 0.1 centimeter (US), 0.9 kilogram (not 0.1 centimetres, 0.9 kilograms)

Numerals must always be used to express measurements. In the text, spell out the units of measurement used; in tables, boxes, lists, captions and labels, use abbreviations.

Example: 2 centimetres (UK) / 2 centimeters (US) [text]
2 cm [table, box, list, caption or label]

When using abbreviations, most use the singular form; however, 'hrs', 'qrs' and 'yds' take an 's' plural.

Example: 2 cm
5 yds

Use SI (Système international d'unités) units of measurement. The basic units are as follows: m (metre/meter); kg (kilogram); s (second); A (ampere); K (kelvin); cd (candela); mol (mole).

Money

In a list, write '£6.00' and '$0.25', not '£6' and '25¢'. For pre-decimal British sums of money, s. and d. (shillings and pence) are roman and take full points (Example: '£3 11s. 4d.'); use '4s. 11d.', not '4/11d.' Isolated references to sums of money are spelled out for whole numbers of ninety-nine or less, using dollars, cents, pounds etc.

Example: James needed five dollars for the bus fare home.

When using dollar currencies other than US dollars, always ensure their national origin is identified for clarity.

Example: C$ (Canadian); A$ (Australian); HK$ (Hong Kong)

For currencies other than dollars, sterling or euros, spell them out, rather than using an unfamiliar symbol.

Example: 2 rupees; 15 francs

Other Languages

Use italic type for any non-English words or phrases that have not been subsumed into English, with a translation in parentheses (formatted as roman) if necessary. (Do not use quotation marks around the translation.) Names of institutions, organizations and other proper nouns should not be italicized.

Example: doppelgänger (double)
 Académie Française (French Academy)

Give titles of foreign-language works in italic, in the language in which they were written / composed / painted etc., and follow with an English translation of the title, in parentheses and in roman.

Example: l'Étranger (The Outsider)

When you quote in languages other than English, use roman type inside quotation marks.

Example: 'Au fait, beau T-shirt'

Localized terminology that may be unfamiliar or confusing to readers should be avoided, and replaced by appropriate terminology for the language chosen. If the term must be included, add an explanation in parentheses.

Example: Jewels and slaves worth five lakh (500,000) rupees were stolen.

Ancient Languages

For Latin and transliterated ancient languages, text should follow the general foreign language guidance.

Single words and phrases within text should be italicized and lowercase (Example: perfect passive portati sumus = we have been carried). Extended extracts of Latin text (such as block quotes and translation passages) should be lowercase (except for proper nouns, which should be capitalized) and roman throughout.

Example:

milites misi ut rege interfecto urbem caperent. cum senator epistula lecta surrexisset, omnes tacuerunt. deus dixit hunc hominem, Romam ingressum, regem futurum esse.

Punctuation

Apostrophes

For singular possessives ending with an -s that has an 's' sound, use -s's.

Example: Jefferson Davis's home,

For singular possessives ending with an -s that has an 'eez' sound, use -s'. (Note that all Classical names use -s'.)

Example: Euripides' plays; Ramses' tomb

Do not use 's for plurals of capitalized abbreviations (NCOs), decades (the 1960s) or names (the Joneses). Do not include apostrophes to prefix 'phone', 'bus' or 'flu'.

Colons and Semicolons

Colons should be used to introduce an element or a series of elements illustrating or amplifying the text preceding the colon (including a list).

Example: The Italian Tricolore features three colours: green, white and red.

Semicolons or full points/periods, not commas, should be used to separate main clauses that have different subjects and are not introduced by a conjunction.

Example: He was trying to write a book; the ideas would not come.

Commas

UK English	US English
Serial commas (i.e. before 'and' in a list of three or more items) should not be used, unless necessary for clarity: Example: red, white and blue The menu choices were fish and chips, steak and chips, or pie and mash.	The serial comma should be included before the "and" in lists of three or more items, especially if each item is a single word or short phrase: Example: red, white, and blue

Do not use a comma with a parenthetical dash. The dash in itself indicates a sufficient pause.

Example: The 'Howard Project' – originally a speculative venture – crystallized in 1932.
NOT
The 'Howard Project' – originally a speculative venture, – crystallized in 1932.

Do not use a comma before the opening of parentheses.

Example: He wrote a letter (not the first one) to his solicitor.
NOT
He wrote a letter, (not the first one) to his solicitor.

Double Punctuation

There is no need for double punctuation at the end of a sentence, either after an abbreviation or after a punctuation mark in inverted commas or a book or article title.

Example: The article was called 'The Potteries, Staffs.'
He was the editor of Which?

Only when the punctuation mark is within parentheses is a final punctuation mark required.

Example: He looked forward to his trip (France, Spain, Malta etc.).

Ellipses (. . .)

Omit ellipses at the beginning of quotations; they should also be omitted from the end of quotations, unless the sentence is deliberately incomplete. Use ellipses to indicate that material is missing within the quotation. Use three spaced points with a character space before and after. If the previous sentence is complete, include its period, then add the ellipsis.

Example: Casca said: ‘There was more foolery yet . . .’

Full Points/Periods

When using parentheses with a full point/period, keep the full point at the end of the sentence. Only when a whole sentence is in parentheses does the full point come before the closing parenthesis.

Example: He looked pale. (He had been ill.)
He looked pale (as one would expect).

Hyphens and Parenthetical Dashes

Use hyphens in attributive adjectival forms where there is any dubiety regarding sense; where multiple prefixes appear in the sentence, hyphenate them all.

Example: little-known detail; well-read individual; much-needed reform long-distance decision making; two-day seminar; nineteenth-century history
There are both short- and long-term consequences.

However, hyphens should not be used for predicative adjectives.

Example: The activity was labour intensive.

When a hyphenated term has an initial cap, revert to lowercase for the letters after the hyphen (Example: Short-term policies); however, when using title case, the second element should be capitalized (e.g. ‘Evaluation of Short-Term Interest Rates in the Bond Market’).

UK English	US English
Use en dashes (not hyphens) to separate parenthetical comments from the rest of a sentence (put a character space on either side of the dash).	Use unspaced em dashes (not hyphens or en dashes) to separate parenthetical comments from the rest of a sentence.
Example: ‘Blah – parenthetical comment – blah’	Example: “Blah—parenthetical comment—blah”

Authors should use en dashes in constructions that include two separate but equal components.

Example: teacher–student dynamic

Use en dashes in place of the word ‘to’.

Example: London–Glasgow train

Parentheses and Brackets

Use brackets – [/] – rather than parentheses – (/) – for interpolations within quotations or round uncertain data in references (for instance, if the date or place of publication is ascertainable but does not appear in the book).

Material within brackets in quotations does not affect the punctuation of the outer sentence. Material within brackets or parentheses can have its own punctuation independent of the outer sentence.

Example: They [the enemy?] rose like one man.

UK English	US English
Do not use brackets to avoid having parentheses within parentheses; if necessary, use either parentheses or parenthetical dashes. Example: (not unlike Richard – his son – and Danielle – his daughter) OR (not unlike Richard (his son) and Danielle (his daughter))	Brackets are permitted for parenthetical purposes within parentheses. Example: (not unlike Richard [his son] and Danielle [his daughter])

Quotations

UK English	US English
Use single quotes except for a quotation within a quotation. Example: He remarked: ‘This charge of “fraudulent conversion” will never stick.’ The full point precedes the closing quotation mark only if the quotation contains a grammatically complete sentence starting with a capital letter. Example: He said: ‘We must be leaving now.’ He told them that a small proportion ‘may be available for distribution’. Be careful to ensure that punctuation is included in the correct place to avoid misinterpretation. Example: Which of Shakespeare’s characters said, ‘All the world’s a stage’?	Use double quotes except for a quotation within a quotation. Example: He remarked: “This charge of ‘fraudulent conversion’ will never stick.” Periods and commas always stand within the quote marks. Example: He said: “We must be leaving now.” He told them that a small proportion “may be available for distribution,”. . . However, other punctuation should stand outside the quote marks. Example: The MP was “unimpressed”; however, the process continued. The book featured a debossed image—“stamp”—on the cover. Tim knew his three “favorite colors”: red, white, and blue.

Quotations over sixty words (forty words for poetry and plays; see Poetry and Plays section below) should be indented and separated from the main text by a space above and below. They should not be set within quotation marks. Quote marks within block quotations should follow the rules above. All quotations should otherwise be consistent in spelling and capitalization with source.

Be sure to indicate by the indentation, or lack of it, of the first word of the matter following the quotation whether it is a new paragraph or a continuation of the paragraph containing the quote. Where the paragraph continues, the sentence following the quote should not be indented.

Example:

As many had predicted, the climate turned out to be a huge obstacle to any effective deployment. During the defence of Diksmuide, one eyewitness saw the Africans pass by:

In the morning the Senegalese are coming through the devastated street . .
. Every day there must be fifteen of them arriving with frozen feet. They look terrible. Big tears trickle down their sallow cheeks.¹¹

The tirailleurs also suffered severely from the infamous trench foot and when temperatures suddenly fell they often were no longer able to use their rifles because their hands were too cold.

Where there is a new paragraph after the quote, the first line should be indented.

Example:

Or, as Judge Harlan formulated it in 1896 in the famous decree of the Supreme Court about the constitutionality of racial segregation:

The white race deems itself to be the dominant race in this country. . . . So, I doubt not, it will continue to be for all time, if it remains true to its great heritage and holds fast to the principles of constitutional liberty.⁶⁰

Because of the experience with slavery, Americans held the most explicit views about the Black race and miscegenation.

Poetry and Plays

Poetry and play quotations of less than forty words can be included in the text. When verse is quoted within a sentence of the main text, line endings should be indicated with a spaced solidus (/).

For verse quoted outside of the main text, any reference should be placed in parentheses on a line below the last line of the quotation, ranged right to align with the longest quoted line.

Leader dots (...) should be avoided at the beginning and end of a quotation; matter not quoted at the beginning of a verse line may be indicated by indenting the line proportionately.

Example:

by Cupid's strongest bow,
By his best arrow with the golden head,
By the simplicity of Venus' doves,
By that which knitteth souls and prospers loves,
(1.1.169–72)

NOTES AND REFERENCES

Notes

Superscript note numbers/markers in the text can be used for explanatory notes, references (which include bibliographic information for sources), or a combination of both. Most authored books use book endnotes; contributed volumes should use chapter endnotes. If footnotes are used, this will be by agreement with the publisher.

Note markers in the text should be placed after all punctuation except dashes.

Example:

The court would not be bound by the usual rules of evidence.¹
Daniels has argued that this is contentious;² nonetheless . . .
It was – as Smith points out³ – a travesty.

All notes must be numbered consecutively through each chapter, i.e. 1, 2, 3 (1, 2, 2a, 2b, 3 etc. is not acceptable). Each superscript number in the text may refer only to one note. If you wish to use the same reference twice, use two notes. Do not place two note markers side-by-side in the main text; if necessary, combine the notes into a single entry. All notes end with a full point/period.

It is fine to use the footnote/endnote function in Word when submitting your manuscript; however, check your proofs carefully to ensure nothing has been lost in the process of conversion.

Use of Ibid. and Other Abbreviations

The abbreviated term ‘ibid.’ (from the Latin ibidem, ‘in the same place’) can obscure the source being cited, so it is preferable to cite the relevant work instead. Where used, it can only be used with short-title referencing, and should be used to refer the work cited in the preceding note provided it contains only a single work. It replaces as much of the reference information as necessary (including author or editor names, title and publication information); if the page reference is also the same, ‘ibid.’ alone will suffice. It can also be used within a single note where there are successive references to the same work.

Example:

5. Austen, Pride and Prejudice, 56.
6. Ibid.
7. Ibid., 67.
8. Jane Austen, Sense and Sensibility (Oxford World’s Classics, [1814] 2012), 40.
Colonel Brandon’s detached nature becomes clearer later on (ibid., 167).

Other antiquated abbreviations – including ‘idem’/‘id.’, ‘et seq.’, ‘supra’, ‘infra’, ‘op. cit.’ and ‘loc. cit.’ – are unhelpful and frustrating for readers, and their use is explicitly prohibited; cite the specific work instead. (See ‘Short-Title/Notes and Bibliography’ section below.)

Referencing

There are two main systems of referencing that can be used: author-date (in-text parenthetical citations and references) and short-title (citations within notes); these are outlined briefly below. Whichever system is adopted it should be used consistently throughout the book – consistency on a chapter-by-chapter basis is not acceptable, and authors and editors will be expected to rework the manuscript if submitted in this way.

Bloomsbury generally uses either author-date or short-title referencing conventions. If other referencing systems have been used (and their use agreed with your editor), please ensure they are used consistently across the book. For further details and guidance on citing publication types not noted here, consult Hart's New Rules, Chicago Manual of Style or your preferred referencing manual.

As a rule, the author-date referencing system should always be accompanied by a references section (including all sources cited); a bibliography or selected bibliography can be used in conjunction with the short-title referencing system, or where there is no explicit referencing system in place.

In line with contemporary practice, it is no longer necessary to include place of publication for books in bibliographies or reference lists; the publisher name alone will suffice. The only exception is for books published before 1900, wherein only the place of publication (rather than the publisher) is required. Bloomsbury are happy to follow whichever approach authors choose to follow provided it is consistent. Examples given below eschew place of publication accordingly.

Where place of publication is included in addition to the publisher, it should precede the publisher's name, with the two separated by a colon.

Example: London: Bloomsbury Academic, 2024

Where more than one place of publication is given, include only the first one provided. Always use the Anglicized version of a place name (Example: Rome not Roma). For places of publication in the United States, include the abbreviated state name (Example: Cambridge, MA).

Author-Date System

This system does not use notes but gives the author's surname and year of publication in the text and the full reference in a references section at the end of the book or, sometimes, at the end of each chapter.

The author's name, date of publication and (if one is needed) page reference are given in parentheses in the text.

Example: the use of tactile cue fading (West 1979: 131–6) was . . .

If the author's name forms part of the sentence it is not necessary to repeat it in the reference:

Example: the use of tactile cue fading initiated by West (1979: 131–6) was . . .

If the author published two or more works in one year, these are labelled 1979a, 1979b etc. If more than one is included in one text reference write: 1979a,b.

Separate multiple in-text references with semicolons.

Example: (West 1979; Kinnes 1988)
(West 1979: 131; Roese 1982: 764)

Works where the date of publication is not known should be cited with 'n.d.' instead of the year. Those works at press or in the process of publication at the time of writing should be cited with 'forthcoming'; publication dates in the future are not valid (as these can be subject to change). Citations to forthcoming works should not include page numbers, as these may also change before publication.

Example: the use of tactile cue fading (West, forthcoming) was . . .

Works with three or more authors should be shortened to Smith et al. All names must be given in the references. If more than one work can be abbreviated using surname and 'et al.', include a second or third name to distinguish them (Example: Smith, Jones et al. 2025; Smith, Peters et al. 2025).

When different authors with the same last name are cited, the in-text citation should include an initial.

Example: (M. Smith 2025)
(X. Smith 1964)

References Section

A references section alphabetically lists all works cited in the text. A bibliography lists only some (and is therefore not acceptable when the author-date referencing system is being used). Always ensure that in-text citations and entries in the references section are consistent, and that any references not cited are deleted. (Where additional sources are considered useful for the reader, these should be included in a separate Further Reading section.)

Either full names or initials may be used in the references list; however, make sure a single style is implemented consistently across the manuscript. Please note that some authors do not use their full name for their publications; always use their initials, even if you are otherwise using full names.

Example:

Kinnes, Ian. (1988). 'The Cattleship Potemkin: Reflections on the First Neolithic in Britain.' In The Archaeology of Context, edited by John Barrett and Ian Kinnes,. University of Sheffield.

Roese, H. (1982), 'Some Aspects of Topographical Locations of Neolithic and Bronze Age Monuments in Wales', Bulletin of the Board of Celtic Studies 29 (1): 763-65.

Schieffelin, Edward L., ed. (1976), The Sorrow of the Lonely and the Burning of the Dancers, St Martin's Press.

Where there are several works cited for one author, cite single-authored works first in chronological order by date of publication.

Example:

Carr, John L. (1965), Teachers in the Classroom, Taylor.
Carr, John L. (1973), The Psychology of Childhood, Taylor.

Always repeat the name for subsequent entries by the same author – the 3-em-dash rule is not allowed in references and bibliographies, as it causes problems for ebook editions.

Works written by the same author plus one other person should be listed next, in alphabetical order by their second authors' surnames, and then chronologically.

Example:

Carr, John L., and Brian Brown (1965)
Carr, John L., and Charlie Brown (1964)
Carr, John L., and Chris Jones (1971)
Carr, John L., Chris Jones and Mollie Smith (1970)

Works written by the same author plus several other persons should be listed in chronological, not alphabetical, order (as the reader will be looking for the date and not the co-author's name, which may not be present in the text reference).

Example:

Carr, J. L., D. Robinson and C. Jones (1958)
Carr, J. L., B. Brown and D. Robinson (1965)
Carr, J. L., B. Brown and C. Jones (1974)

Books

All author/editor details should be included, as well as additional contributors such as translators or editors of historic books, along with edition details if necessary.

Example:

Althusser, Louis. 1980. The Stuff of Things. Translated by J. Smith. Continuum.
Bullock, Charles S., III, and Mark J. Rozell, eds. 2025. The New Politics of the Old South: An Introduction to Southern Politics. 8th ed. Bloomsbury Academic.
Herodotus. 2013. The Histories. Edited by Paul Cartledge. Translated by Tom Holland. Penguin.

Where there is no author, or the authorship is unknown, use the full title in the reference list (with an abridged version for in-text citations). Do not use 'Anon.' or 'Anonymous' in place of the author's name.

Example:

UK: O: A Presidential Novel (2011), Simon and Schuster.

Chapter in an Edited Collection

Always include all collection editors' names as well as page range for a chapter in an edited collection.

Example:

Geraghty, C. (2007), 'Re-examining Stardom: Questions of Texts, Bodies and Performance', in S. Redmond and S. Holmes (eds), Stardom and Celebrity: A Reader, 93–105, Sage.

N.B. Cross-references to other publications mentioned in the references list (Example: 'in Redmond and Holmes, 93–105') are not allowed, as this compromises the usefulness of the information for the reader – include the full publication details in each case.

Dissertations

Unpublished dissertations should have the titles placed within quotation marks, with details of the awarding institution (but not department) included.

Example:

Knox, K. B. (2010), 'Having the Stars', MA diss., Central Saint Martins College of Art and Design, University of the Arts, London.

Published dissertations should be formatted in the same way as books.

Film and Broadcast Media

Films and TV programmes should always be referred to by title, rather than director, writer etc. The medium should be included in square brackets to make clear it is not a written source.

Films should include the details of the director (where known) and film studio or distributor.

Example:

Macbeth (1948), Directed by Orson Welles. [Film]. Republic Pictures.

Episodes of television programmes should be cited by the episode name/number rather than the series; transmission information should be given, even if the episode itself was viewed online.

Example:

'Don't Forget the Sea' (2020), I May Destroy You, series 1, episode 3. BBC One Television. 15 June, 21:00.

Podcasts should include the date they were published or made available, rather than when they were downloaded. Cite by presenter/author names, and include the episode number and/or title.

Example:

Grumbridge, A. and V. Raison (2024), The Deserter Pubcast: Episode 24: Catford and Bellingham [Podcast]. 15 October. Available at: <https://deserter.co.uk/2024/10/pubcast-catford-and-bellingham> (accessed 18 November 2024).

Journal Articles

Always include volume number, issue number (in parentheses) and page range for journal articles; there is no need to include publication month or season unless there is no other issue identifier. Special issue titles and editors, if applicable, are not necessary.

Example:

Steele, V. (1997), 'Anti-fashion: The 1970s', Fashion Theory: The Journal of Dress, Body & Culture, 1 (3): 279-96.

Magazine/Newspaper Articles

Always include full title, publication date and page numbers for newspaper or magazine articles, as otherwise they may be difficult to find. Where the author is unknown, begin with the full article title (use an abridged version for in-text citations).

Example:

Bidou, H. (1912), 'Introduction', Gazette du bon ton, November: 1-4.
'Photo Report on the Hungarotex Export Fashion Show' (1966), This Is Fashion, June: 4-5.
Smith, J. (2010), 'England Continue To Struggle', Daily Mail, 3 July: 68.

Online Resources

For online sources, the reference should be formatted as normal, with the addition of a full URL (homepages of newspapers etc. are not acceptable; nor are shortened URLs or QR codes) and access date when dates of publication are not available. Blogs, online magazines etc. can be treated in the same way as their print equivalents.

Example:

Trebay, G. (2007), 'Ignoring Diversity, Runways Fade to White', New York Times, 14 October. Available online:
<https://www.nytimes.com/2007/10/14/fashion/shows/14race.html> (accessed 30 July 2013).

As URLs are subject to change, be sparing in their use and only include them where a source would be difficult to find otherwise; URLs must be checked shortly before submission to ensure they are still valid. Sources which have been formally published elsewhere (i.e. journal articles, books) do not require URLs.

Reprinted and Republished Works

If you are citing a reprint or modern edition, include the original publication date in brackets; however, only include the publication information of the edition cited.

Example:

Austen, Jane ([1814] 2012), Sense and Sensibility, Penguin.

The in-text citation should reflect this.

Example:

Austen ([1814] 2012)

Short-Title/Notes and Bibliography

The most usual form of the short-title system provides a full reference in the form of a note only at the first mention of the book, and thereafter a shortened version of the title can be used.

Example:

1. Mary Hamer, Writing by Numbers: Trollope's Serial Fiction (Cambridge University Press, 1987), 25.
2. Hamer, Writing by Numbers, 27.
3. Herbert Roesse, 'Some Aspects of Topographical Locations of Neolithic and Bronze Age Monuments in Wales', Bulletin of the Board of Celtic Studies 29, no. 1 (1982): 764.
4. Ian Kinnes, 'The Cattleship Potemkin: Reflections on the First Neolithic in Britain', in The Archaeology of Context, ed. John Barrett and Ian Kinnes (University of Sheffield, 1988), 308.

Note that the short title can be used again if another reference intervenes.

Example:

1. Mary Hamer, Writing by Numbers: Trollope's Serial Fiction (Cambridge University Press, 1987), 25.
2. Herbert Roesse, 'Some Aspects of Topographical Locations of Neolithic and Bronze Age Monuments in Wales', Bulletin of the Board of Celtic Studies 29, no. 1 (1982): 764.
3. Jane Austen, Sense and Sensibility (1814; Oxford University Press, 2012), 23.
4. Hamer, Writing by Numbers, 250.
5. William Strunk, Jr, and E. B. White, The Elements of Style, 4th ed. (Allyn and Bacon, 2000), 90.

Bibliography

The bibliography style differs slightly from the reference-list style; the date of publication should appear at the end, as readers will be searching by author name and work title. Works should be formatted as follows (ordered by author/editor surname, then by work name).

Example:

- Austen, Jane. Sense and Sensibility. 1814. Reprinted with notes and introduction. Oxford University Press, 2012.
- Kinnes, Ian. 'The Cattleship Potemkin: Reflections on the First Neolithic in Britain'. In The Archaeology of Context, edited by John Barrett and Ian Kinnes. University of Sheffield, 1988.
- Roesse, Horst. 'Some Aspects of Topographical Locations of Neolithic and Bronze Age Monuments in Wales'. Bulletin of the Board of Celtic Studies 29, no. 1 (1982): 763–65.
- Schieffelin, Egon, and John F. Riebow. The Sorrow of the Lonely and the Burning of the Dancers. St Martin's Press, 1976.
- Strunk, William, Jr, and E. B. White. The Elements of Style. 4th ed. Allyn and Bacon, 2000.

Either full names or initials may be used in the notes and bibliography, though full names are more common; where in doubt, use the styling of the name on the title page (and standardize names where authors have used different conventions across publications). Please note that some authors do not use their full name for their publications; always use their initials, even if you are otherwise using full names.

Styling

Entries in the notes and bibliography should include all the information noted in the references guidelines above; examples of styling for common sources for both notes and bibliography are given below.

Books

1. Florence Babb, Between Field and Cooking Pot: The Political Economy of Marketwomen in Peru, rev. ed. (University of Texas Press, 1999).
2. Jacques Barzun, Simple and Direct: A Rhetoric for Writers, 2nd ed. (1985; repr., University of Chicago Press, 1994).
3. O: A Presidential Novel (Simon & Schuster, 2011).

O: A Presidential Novel. Simon & Schuster, 2011.

Chapter in an Edited Collection

When citing a chapter, the full page range is not required – only the page number(s) of the material quoted or cited. Page ranges are not required in the bibliography.

1. Christine Geraghty, 'Re-examining Stardom: Questions of Texts, Bodies and Performance', in Stardom and Celebrity: A Reader, ed. Sean Redmond and Su Holmes (Sage, 2007), 100.

Magazine and Newspaper Articles

Newspapers are best cited in the notes or parenthetically within the text. However, should an entry in the bibliography be required, the publication title should stand in place of the author name for unsigned articles.

1. Helene Bidou, 'Introduction', Gazette du bon ton, November 1912, 1–4.
2. James Smith, 'England Continue to Struggle', Daily Mail, 3 July 2010, 68.
3. 'Photo Report on the Hungarotex Export Fashion Show', This Is Fashion, June 1966, 4–5.

This Is Fashion. 'Photo Report on the Hungarotex Export Fashion Show'. June 1966, 4–5.

Special Reference Types

Biblical References

Names of biblical books are normally spelled out in full, except when they are followed by a chapter and verse reference. (Note that ‘book’ is never capitalized.)

Example:

In the book of Genesis we read . . .
In Gen. 1.1 we read . . .

When referring to biblical, apocryphal/deuterocanonical books, italics should not be used (Example: ‘In Genesis, we see that . . .’). However, other titles of ancient sources, including pseudepigrapha, should appear in italics (Example: ‘In 3 Macc. we see that . . .’).

N.B. See Appendix A for a full list of biblical abbreviations.

Chapter and Verse

The words ‘chapter’ and ‘verse’ should be abbreviated to ‘ch.’ and ‘v.’ (the plural forms ‘chs’ and ‘vv.’) when they are followed by a text reference. This rule does not apply at the beginning of a sentence, where they are written out in full.

Example:

This can be seen from v. 21, which . . .
The term occurs repeatedly in ch. 8 and chs 11–12 . . .
. . . to the end of the text. Chapter 7 begins . . .

UK English	US English
When using abbreviated references, use a period to separate verse and chapter numbers.	When using abbreviated references, use a colon to separate verse and chapter numbers.
Example: Gen. 1.31	Example: Gen. 1:31

Note that ranges should be given in the following format:

Gen. 1.31–2.2 (use an en dash to indicate chapters)
Gen. 1.1–3 (use a hyphen to indicate verses)

Classical Greek and Latin Works

As the numbers identifying parts of classical works (books, sections, lines etc.) remain the same across all editions, citations can generally be included parenthetically or within notes – they only need to be added to the references or bibliography if a specific edition is referred to.

Book, section and line numbers should be referred to using Arabic (not Roman) numerals; where letters are also used, these should generally be lowercase. Page numbers need not be added, unless the citation refers to additional material supplied by modern contributors or to specific translations.

Example:

The eighty days of inactivity reported by Thucydides (8.44.4)
This is keenly observed by Ovid (Amores 1.7.27)

Where an author is mentioned alongside the work in the citation, place a comma between the author name and title of the work (but not between the work and the book/section/line reference).

Abbreviations of authors' names are allowable, and should follow The Oxford Classical Dictionary (Oxford University Press, 2012); however, they should be avoided where only two letters are omitted, or where it may create confusion (such as Aristotle/Aristophanes).

Example:

Aristotle, Metaphysics 3.2.996b5–8; Plato, Republic 360e–361b.
Cic., Verr. 1.3.21, 2.3.120; Caes., B Gall. 6.19.

English Classic Poems and Plays

N.B. See Appendix B for Arden Shakespeare titles.

Classic English poetry and plays can usually be cited by book, canto and stanza; stanza and line; act, scene and line etc. (thus negating the need for full publication details). For frequently cited works and for those of Shakespeare (where wording, line numbering and scene division can differ), the specific edition should be noted either in the first note reference or in the bibliography.

Example: See Milton, Paradise Lost, bk 1, lines 83–6.

The citation system can be shortened, omitting 'act', 'scene' etc., as long as the system is explained in the Notes. Please use Arabic numerals, separated by period marks.

Example: Pope, Rape of the Lock, 3.28–9.

Unpublished Material

Unpublished sources that are not freely available, such as personal communications and fieldwork or personal interviews, should not follow the referencing conventions above, as it is impossible for the reader to access them. Where it is necessary to cite them, the nature of the source should be given in the citation, but no entry should be given in the bibliography or references section.

Example: 'as Stu Bennett noted (personal communication, 10 August 2022)'
1. Stu Bennett, personal communication, 10 August 2022.

This does not apply to unpublished dissertations or reports which are available online or in repositories; these can be cited as normal, with corresponding bibliography/reference entries.

Pseudepigrapha

The following works known as the Pseudepigrapha are those included in the current standard English translation, James H. Charlesworth (ed.), The Old Testament Pseudepigrapha (2 vols.; London: Darton, Longman & Todd, 1983, 1985).

Though some of the names listed below are those of the authors or presumed authors of texts, it is conventional to regard the name of the author as the name of the work, and so to set both the abbreviation and the full title in italics.

BIBLICAL

Note that biblical references should be arranged in canonical sequence (following the order used in most English Bible translations). Arrangement of biblical books following in Hebrew (Masoretic) canonical sequence is acceptable in some cases. Authors should discuss this matter with a member of Bloomsbury's editorial staff before imposing this sequencing on biblical references.

BIBLIOGRAPHICAL

The bibliographical abbreviations in this list should be used in all manuscript submissions to T&T Clark.

It is the duty of the author of a monograph or editor of a multi-author volume to compile the list of abbreviations used in the submitted manuscript. The list should be alphabetically arranged and should contain only those abbreviations deployed in the manuscript.

Authors/editors are free to use additional abbreviations. Generally, however, there is no need to create new abbreviations for items that appear only once in a manuscript. New abbreviations should be brought to the attention of the editorial/production staff, and the full form must be included alongside the shortened form in the abbreviations list.

Appendix B: Bloomsbury Arden Shakespeare Guidelines

The following style guidelines apply only to Arden Shakespeare titles; any other elements within the text for these titles should follow the general style guidelines.

All quoted extracts should be from the Arden Third/Fourth Series (or, if unavailable, Complete Works) edition of the play. The material should be quoted verbatim with line breaks exactly as they appear in the edition cited (whether the original text is verse or prose). Please take extra care to ensure the accuracy of quoted text, as copy-editors and proof-readers will not have access to the text to check.

* as appropriate in the context

In the text, fuller abbreviations can be used to avoid repetition: All's Well; Merry Wives; 1 Henry IV.

FORMATTING GUIDELINES FOR PLAY EXTRACTS

Character names are given in roman small caps in both the dialogue and stage directions. Stage directions are italicised and centred; dialogue is left aligned.

Example:

BRABANTIO

What is the reason of this terrible summons?

What is the matter there?

When a verse or prose speech starts with a full or short line, or a part line that constitutes the first portion of a divided line, it is placed on a new line below the speech prefix, indented by three spaces.

Example:

COTTA

My letter is the very same with yours;

Subsequent dialogue follows below with the same indentation.

Example:

RODERIGO

Here is her father's house, I'll call aloud.

IAGO

Do, with like timorous accent and dire yell

As when by night and negligence the fire

Is spied in populous cities.

Where verse lines are divided between several speakers, later sections of the line appear on the same line as the SP for the new speaker, and are indented to start one space beyond the end of the previous speech:

Example:

HORATIO

What means my love?

BEL-IMPERIA

I know not what myself,

If the standard indentation would result in the last word of the line over-running the right-hand text margin, the part lines should overlap slightly as needed to fit:

Example:

Our eyes from rest?

Enter DAWBNEY.

The news?

DAWBNEY

Ten thousand Cornish

Where a line is too long for the typeset page, it should follow on with a further three-space indent underneath the first part of the line.

Example:

OTHELLO

Keep up your bright swords, for the dew will rust them.

Good signior, you shall more command with years
Than with your weapons.

Act, scene and line references should be given on the line below the extract, aligned flush right on the page.

DUKE

I think this tale would win my daughter too.

Good Brabantio, take up this mangled matter at the best:

Men do their broken weapons rather use
Than their bare hands.

(Oth 1.3.171–5)

Depending on the context, citations can be shortened: if a particular play is being discussed, the play name can be discarded; if a certain scene is being discussed, only line numbers need be given.

Appendix C: Bloomsbury Methuen Drama Play Texts

The following guidelines apply to modern plays being typeset for the first time, or material being adapted for a new play collection (where requested). They should also be used for any extracts from plays within critical text to ensure consistent formatting throughout.

STYLE FOR COPY

In general where there is a break in the text (for example, between lines of dialogue, stage directions etc.), a line space should be inserted.

Act and Scene Numbers

Act numbers appear in a larger font, italicised and spelled out.

Example:

Act One

Scene numbers should be written out (do not use numbers) with initial caps in roman and bold.

Example:

Scene Eight

Narrator High noon on Saturday.

Characters

Lists of characters usually precede the main play; character names are set in lower case with initial capitalization and bold, with notes included in italics on the same line.

Example:

Characters

Narrator

Jack, Celtic fan

Courtney, Rangers fan

Steph, Jack's mum's boyfriend

Within the play text, all character names outside dialogue should be lower case with initial capitalization, bold and roman, even in stage directions. However, there is no need to do this for indirect character references, such as 'he', 'she', 'him', 'her' etc.

Example:

Donny That awful, hairy chin on her. (Pause.) Let me have a crack at that cat, now. You do a poor job of cat covering.

Donny gets up and Davey lets him take over, sitting down with the poteen.

Where a character's dialogue continues after a stage direction, the character name does not need to be repeated; the dialogue should start again below the direction, full-out.

Example:

Steph (shouts) Deal. Us. Promise.

He starts to eat the cold grease-welded mess in the cardboard pizza box.

Am a pure dick sometimes.

However, where the stage direction includes another character's name, when dialogue resumes the character name should be repeated to avoid confusion.

Example:

Steph (shouts) Deal. Us. Promise.

John starts to eat the cold grease-welded mess in the cardboard pizza box.

Steph Am a pure dick sometimes.

Dialogue

In most cases, dialogue should be unchanged from the original supplied – house style does not need to be applied.

Dialogue should begin one em-space after the character name; if a stage direction follows the character name, it should begin one em-space after the stage direction. There should be a line space between the end of one character's dialogue and the start of another's.

Example:

Amanda You're a pompous ass!

Victor (horrified) Amanda!

Stage Directions

Stage directions should always appear in italics, lower case and aligned with the main text – full out, not indented.

Stage directions that occur within dialogue should appear in parentheses with punctuation contained within.

Example:

James Right. Okay. What have we here? (Reads.) It's Okay to be Different.

Parenthetical stage directions occurring before a character speaks should begin with a lower-case letter and should not have punctuation in the parentheses.

Example:

All (sing) Blinded by the light!

Appendix D: Accessible Bloomsbury Methuen Drama Play Texts

The following guidelines apply to modern plays being typeset for the first time, or material being adapted for a new play collection (where requested). They should also be used for any extracts from plays within critical text to ensure consistent formatting throughout.

Within the play text, all character names outside dialogue should be lower case with initial capitalization, bold and roman, even in stage directions. However, there is no need to do this for indirect character references, such as 'he', 'she', 'him', 'her' etc.

Example:

(Donny gets up and Davey lets him take over, sitting down with the poteen.)

Where a character's dialogue continues after a stage direction, the character name does not need to be repeated; the dialogue should start again below the direction, full-out.

Example:

Steph (shouts) Deal. Us. Promise.

Stage Directions

Stage directions should always appear in parentheses, roman, lower case and set indented from the main text.

Stage directions that occur within dialogue should appear in parentheses with punctuation contained within.

Example:

James Right. Okay. What have we here? (Reads.) 'It's Okay to be Different'.

Parenthetical stage directions occurring before a character speaks should begin with a lower-case letter and should not have punctuation in the parentheses. This should also be set roman.

Example:

All (sing) Blinded by the light!

Other Style Changes

The use of italic should be avoided. As such, the following changes should be made:

- Titles of plays, books, films, magazines and periodicals in the programme pages and the play text should use single quote marks instead of italic.

Example:

'The Guardian'

- Emphasis should use bold instead of italic.

Example:

Will you really though?
